REV. CALE J. CROWLEY, S.S. INCOMING PRESIDENT FOR ST. JOSEPH'S

The Provincial Council of the Society of St. Sulpice announced in late January that Rev. Cale J. Crowley, S. S., Ph.D., was selected to be the President-Rector of St. Joseph's College effective July 1, 1988.

Fr. Crowley will succeed Rev. Gerald L. Coleman, S. S., Ph.D., who will assume the responsibilities of President-Rector of St. Patrick's Seminary in Menlo Park.

Presently, Fr. Crowley is Vice-Rector of Theological College in Washington, D.C., and also director of the Basselin Program there. He returns to St. Joseph's after four years in Washington.

Fr. Crowley was Vice-Rector for many years at St. Joseph's, was a professor of Philosophy and directed many dramatic productions at the College.

During a short visit to St. Joseph's in February of this year, Fr. Crowley said "he was glad to be coming home." He is looking forward to working with the Alumni Association.

The Alumni welcomes Fr. Crowley back, and wishes him many successful years at St. Joseph's.

The College is deeply indebted to the alumni who responded so generously to this Annual Appeal.

THE SEMINARY IN THE CHURCH

During his Fall visit of last year with the American Bishops in Los Angeles, Pope John Paul II indicated that the seminaries sustain the future of the Church. Certainly the viability of the Church and its destiny lies within the hands and hearts of all of us since, as the Second Vatican Council has pointed out, we are all members of the People of God, the Church.

The Pope's statement, however, specifies the essential ingredient of ordained priesthood within the whole complexity which is the Church. It is incumbent, then, on all of us to do our best to make our seminaries strong and viable houses of formation; and to do our utmost to encourage and foster vocations to the priesthood.

Recent studies by CARA in Washington, D.C., have clearly analyzed the observable trend that enrollments in college seminaries have dramatically declined in the past ten years. St. Joseph's College has experienced this fact, while happily sustaining a representative number of seminarians. The CARA studies clearly point out that today's seminaries, both on the college and theologate levels, are not attracting the academic top ten per cent of students across the country. While there are certainly myriad reasons for this fact, the CARA studies point out that a pivotal and critical problem is that local priests are not encouraging young men to consider the priesthood, certainly in the ways that priests have done this during previous eras.

It is interesting, and certainly hopeful, that numerous seminarians are at St. Joseph's College and St. Patrick's Seminary who come from Hispanic and Vietnamese backgrounds. This fact demonstrates clearly that these students have been, and are strongly encouraged in their vocation by their local priests, as well as their own families.

It is crucial that priests and parents learn from this significant cultural and religious phenomenon and take it as a critical responsibility to strongly foster vocations in all of our cultures and family backgrounds.

The Church is comprised of all men and women of good faith, committed to the Lord, and willing to work in service for the preaching of the Gospel. The Second Vatican Council has pointed out the significant role and responsibility of the ordained priesthood within the context of the Church. Thus the Pope's statement to the American Bishops is of utmost importance. We should all feel the urgency to strongly encourage and foster young men to seriously consider a call to priesthood. Seminary structures have certainly changed a great deal to foster a healthy and viable atmosphere and context for formation in ministry and toward priesthood.

Memories of some days in the past still linger in the minds of many, and this might well serve as an inner hindrance preventing some of us in our important task of fostering vocations to the priesthood. I cannot underline sufficiently the need we must all take upon ourselves to see clearly the critical nature of the Church's future and its unbreakable link with ordained priesthood.

For my own part, I am now leaving St. Joseph's College for the third time. I first left here as a rhet in 1963 to continue my first year of theology at St. Patrick's Seminary. For most of us at that time, this leaving was difficult since we had expended so much of our growing years here in the beautiful atmosphere of the Los Altos Hills.

I again left St. Joseph's College in 1972 for graduate studies in Toronto, having completed four years of teaching theology at the college level. That "leaving" was grounded in a great deal of sadness, for I thought that I would never have the opportunity to return to St. Joseph's College.

This fact proved to be untrue; but I now leave here for the third time, again for the brief journey north to St. Patrick's Seminary. This "leaving" is also mixed with sadness, as the faculty, staff and extraordinarily fine community of students which comprise the College are a family that has touched my heart very deeply.

I am absolutely convinced of the importance of formation at the college level in order to assure, with the Lord's grace, important and necessary preparation of today's student for the priesthood. I have a hunch that perhaps I have returned here personally for these past three years in order to see this fact clearly and convincingly.

I thank this community for the many graces and gifts it has given me, and I certainly pledge to you my unwavering support and undaunted esteem.

It is incumbent on all of us to heed carefully the words of John Paul II to the Bishops in Los Angeles so that we will all participate together in making St. Joseph's College an important place for the future of the Church.

Director of Financial Aid Office

Financial Aid is offered to eligible students at St. Joseph's College in the form of scholarships, on-campus student-assistant employment, Veterans benefits, State government grants (Cal Grants), and Federal Title IV funds (Pell Grants, College Work-Study, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants and Guaranteed Loans).

Eligibility for scholarships, student assistant employment, Veterans benefits and Cal Grants is determined by the donor(s), the on-campus employer(s), the Veterans Administration, and the California Student Aid Commission respectively.

In order to receive aid from the Federal Title IV programs, a student at St. Joseph's College must be enrolled in an eligible program normally as at least a half-time student, be a U.S. citizen or an eligible non-citizen, be making satisfactory academic progress, and, if born on or before January 1, 1960, be registered with the Selective Service. Students must also demonstrate financial need and agree to use any financial aid money received only toward educationally related expenses (tuition, fees, room and board, books, transportation, etc.). In addition, aid applicants must not owe a refund on a Pell Grant or Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant, nor be in default on a Guaranteed Student Loan at any institution.

During the 1987-88 academic year, approximately 60% of the students enrolled at St. Joseph's College received some type of financial aid from one or more of the State and Federal programs. Maximum award amounts by program per student for the 1987-88 academic year were:

Since the Fall Newsletter, there has been considerable activity by your Alumni Association.

At the September meeting of the Alumni Board, a gift of $8,000 to the College and $300 to the Student Council was approved. The gifts were presented to Fr. Coleman and the Student Council in early October. The recipients expressed their gratification to you, the Alumni. These gifts were made possible because of your participation and involvement in the Association.

In December of last year, the first "Captain's Dinner" was held. Who is a Captain? Early in 1987, a letter went to many alumni asking if they would be interested in being a "Class Captain." The purpose was twofold: 1) to create a larger base on which to draw assistance in promoting the Association, and 2) to assist in expanding the overall alumni by providing addresses of fellow classmen.

Approximately 40 alumni attended the dinner hosted by Fr. Coleman and Don Carroll, chairman of the Captain's Program. Special thanks to Don for a great idea and a fine evening for all. Anyone who is interested in being a "Class Captain" should let us know.

When the next Newsletter hits the stands, there will be a new President-Rector at St. Joseph's, Fr. Cale Crowley. Many of you know Father since he spent a number of years at St. Joseph's. We look forward to working with him in furthering the purposes of the Alumni Association.

Since this will be the last Newsletter before Fr. Coleman leaves St. Joseph's to become the President-Rector of St. Patrick's, we certainly wish him continued success.

On behalf of the Alumni, I want to express our sincere appreciation to Fr. Coleman for his total support and leadership in continuing the progress and furthering the growth of the Association. Thanks, Father, and the best at St. Pat's.

In late March, the Alumni Association co-sponsored a bus trip to Camarillo for St. Joseph's seminarians who spent a weekend at St. John's Seminary for the annual Inter-Seminary Meet.

It isn't too early to plan to attend Alumni Day on September 16, so mark your calendar now. The Committee has already met and plans are underway to make this event most enjoyable.

We are interested in hearing from you regarding any suggestions you may have for your Association. Please write and let us have your comments.

Have a great summer, and I hope to see you on September 16th.

HOMILY FOR ALUMNI DAY, Sept. 11, 1987

Rev. Thomas Lacey

It seems to me rather interesting that the Readings from Scripture would have to do with Paul writing to his young disciple, the Bishop Timothy. The Gospel reading from Luke reminds both Teachers and Disciples that the processes of teaching and learning are not easy and never have been easy and never will be easy.

The entire relationship between Paul and Timothy fascinates me in view of today's festivities, honoring St. Joseph's College and its Alumni among the laity of the Church and among the clergy.

Paul tells us in several places how trying and burdensome was the concern of all the churches. So, he had to subdelegate the preaching and the supervision of the various churches in Greece. He chose a young man from a well-placed Greek family to continue his work in the City of Ephesus. Paul, with some misgivings, established this young man as the head of the Church of Ephesus, while Paul continued roaming the Mediterranean world in search of other groups of Gentiles who would listen to the message of the Gospel. So, Timothy became the overseer, or bishop, of Ephesus. The disciple becomes a teacher. The duty to teach and serve the people is handed down to a new generation.

This handing down of responsibility and authority to teach is the method used from the time of the Apostles until our very own time. As even major industrial firms have to admit, THE SYSTEM WORKS!

Shortly after the era of the Apostolic Churches, it became necessary for the various Bishops of growing numbers of district churches to establish some kind of training schools for young persons who would serve as the overseers, the bishops and priests of newly formed churches. From about the fourth century on this task was taken over by the monasteries. The learned monks would accept candidates for parish ministry into their regular novice educational plan. When a student matured to about twenty-five or so, he would leave the monastery and his local bishop would ordain him and assign him to a parish church.

It is historical over-simplification to jump immediately from the fourth century to the Council of Trent, but what happened in this Sixteenth Century Council was a mandate to all bishops to establish in their dioceses -- or at least in provinces -- seminaries, which would have the responsibility of educating future ministers of the Church. St. Joseph's was founded upon such a mandate.

Therefore, I see the professors of St. Joseph's College as successors to Paul. I cannot say that I always treated my professors with the same dignity I would give Paul, but I meant well, anyway. They share that dignity now in my heart.

I love to read as much as I can on Paul. I envisage him as a gutsy firebrand who was willing to "take on the system." He was a man well educated in languages; an expert in the Hebrew Scriptures -- probably a Rabbi. His love for the Person of Jesus stands as a "classic." He was referred to by non-Christian historians as a "Christ inebriated man."

Paul was also a passionate lover of the Brotherhood, the Church. He recognized and gave honor and respect to Kephas -- Peter, as the Head of the Church, which Paul loved and fostered. But at the Council of Jerusalem, Paul argued and won the case for baptizing Gentiles straightaway instead of doing what Peter was doing -- forcing circumcision into Jewry before Baptism. At the close of the fiasco, says Paul, "I shared the hand of friendship with Kephas and James and went about preaching and baptizing as I had been instructed by the Master Himself."

I look back on my professors here at St. Joseph's of an era fifty long years ago as being counterparts of Paul and successors of the early monks of Christianity. I see the faces of most of them this moment: Joey Nevins, Lyman Fenn, Lefty Allen, Johnny Lynn, Bucky O'Connor, Mike Sheehy, Victor "The Dean" Bast, Pop Rock, John O'Neill and a host of others. Each of these men held credentials in several fields. They were all highly qualified educators. Each of them held Roman and/or American University degrees in Literature, Theology, Scripture and the Sciences.

You can add to this host Alexander "Poop" Peltier and Eugene "Soupy" Saupin who were trained at St. Sulpice in the center of the Sorbonne in Paris and had served as professors of Scripture and Theology at the Grand Seminaire in Montreal and the Sulpician Seminary at Baltimore before coming to St. Joseph's.

These guys were giants in my estimation. In comparison to them, we students were pygmies. I was fourteen years old when I came here in second high or Fifth Latin, as it was called.

In our day and age only the wealthy could afford a college education for their children. Most of our contemporaries got their education the "hard way;" they earned it. They served our country in duty in World War II and returned home to utilize the "G.I. Bill" to get into college and earn their degrees. We seminarians were most fortunate. I owe the Church and this seminary, my Alma Mater, and those giants on our faculty -- I owe them everything that I am and all the skills I have.

I've had a chance to travel and go to university in Europe. The preparation in languages given here at St. Joseph's has enabled me to become conversant in a few European languages and to augment my education.

I've served in little parishes briefly in Latin America from Mexicali to Rio de Janeiro in Brazil, and have spoken fairly good Spanish and Portuguese because I received my training here at St. Joe's in basic Latin, Greek, and French. I did not appreciate this advantage when I was a student. I resented the discipline and effort demanded of me. The "payoff" was worth the effort.

In my old age reading books has been my pastime and my hobby...my salvation. I seldom use TV. This skill means something to me as I hit old age. I received the foundation of this skill here at St. Joe's and I am forever grateful for this education.

My political activism often upsets my conservative parishioners...and some of my fellow priests; and I can't help that. I've seen and lived in much poverty and injustice in all of my junkets to Latin America. I think the system stinks and I will do whatever I can to change that system. I believe that this is what my profs taught me to do here at St. Joe's. At any rate, this is how I interpreted them.

As my professors would, I weep with joy as I see Our Beloved Mother, the Church, embracing the poor and lonely in Latin America. I have lived through dramatic changes there. I've always known that priests and sisters and laity have fought the battles of the poor. And, now there are guys like Oscar Romero and Pedro Casaldaliga and Helder Camara among the bishops of the Church who are turning the Latin American world on its head. The poor and the Church of the Poor have already won the battle south of the border.

I am sure that St. Joseph's faculty today, under Father Jerry Coleman, is just as good, if not better, than ours was fifty years ago. I am certain it will always be thus. Paul will always be there to educate Timothy. Timothy will always be asked to take upon his young shoulders some of the burden of the Churches. Then, he in his turn, must reach into tomorrow to find other disciples who will preach the Gospel to the generation that follows.

I conclude by wishing that the Timothys of tomorrow's Church will have the good fortune to have the support of the lay alumni of St. Joseph's College as we have had down through our years of labor in the Bay Area. The reputation of St. Joseph's - St. Patrick's Alumni is known and celebrated all over the United States especially for the way the lay alumni have supported the seminaries. In some way tonight, we celebrate together our own passionate love of Mother Church, and our love for one another as well.... God bless.

(Rev. Thomas Lacey is a member of the Class of '37. Publication of his homily delivered last Alumni Day is included in this Newsletter so that those who could not attend Alumni Day will have the privilege of sharing Father's memories and hopes of the College.)
